High up in the misty mountains, nestled among sparkling streams and fountains where whispering pines danced all day long, there stood a grand old house where Grandma and Grandpa Clouse lived with lots of love and memories. Their home wasn't just any house—it was a magical, laughter-filled haven where love bloomed and happiness danced in every corner. Birds sang at the windows, the fountains giggled all day, and the nights... oh, the nights were calm and dreamy under the magical moonlight.

But one day... something crept in. A sneaky, shadowy mouse—not an ordinary mouse, but a cunning, wicked one—came in with a terrible plan. It nibbled at furniture, knocked over flowerpots, and left trails of chaos behind. But worst of all... it had its beady eyes set on taking over the entire house!

One night, when Grandpa was away in the town, the mouse made its move. It crept closer and closer to Grandma, who was sleeping in the bed. Grandma got scared and she felt a chill—not from the wind—but from fear. After a while, the mouse asked Grandma to leave the house. But when she refused, the mouse attacked Grandma and tried to take over the entire house Oh no!! Grandma was feared and she was scared.... Would the mouse succeed? Would Grandma be okay? Would the house lose its magic?
